		Could this be an Overton p-n Clay	1784	Cheshire RO, DHL/GG/33a/8. ? v. FPN, 139-40.

The principal problem with the place-name Cloy is that on the Cassini reproduction of O.S.Map(1833-43) there are four locations bearing this name, all simply designated thus; one at 3942, two within 33943 and the last at 3944. Clay Overton is the only safe bet as it is within the SJ 3942 as on Landranger.

The Llys hereabouts was the residence of one of the principal Flintshire families, that of Ednywain Bendew. According to the poet Dafydd ab Edmwnd (*fl.*1470) one of the family's descendents who lived here was Gruffydd ap Dafydd ab Ithel Fychan, 'Gwr y sydd heb garu Sais.' FHSJ, 36(2003), 82-95.

If not Deiniol Sant ~ A George Daniell received a 20 yr grant of the profits accruing from a lease of the town and lordship of Ewloe in 1447. It was in recompense for a lease for 40 yrs of the same township previously granted to him by the king, 'anticipated and rendered void by a lease of the same town made by chamberain of Chester to Robert & Nicholas More for 20 yrs.' [P.R.O., 37th DeputyKeeper's Report (1876), 179.]

Worshipping at St.Deiniol's the locals would surely have known the difference between that name and Daniel!(!?)

The surname Dymock comes from Dafydd ap Morgan of Maelor Saesneg.
 It probably developed Dai ap Madog > Dai Moc > Dymock ?
 So I was told many moons ago.
 Bertrand might tell us who he was?

I've no idea which was which in the Flints Lay Subsidy Roll of 1292. They appear as :
La Vaynole & Evaneaul

It is likely that some of the above refer to Faenol Fawr [SJ 0076] built 1597, 1690 & 1725.
I've found one recordings of it. Faenol Fawr 1875 O.S.Map. See List D.

For a dissenting opinion, that Flint was a code-name for the First Edwardian military campaign, see A J Taylor in E M Jope(ed.), Studies in Building History (1961), 129n3.

His citing of a 21 July 1277 document that records the setting up of a field headquarters apud le Flynt prope Basingwerk seems to contradict his earlier thoughts. A J Taylor, The King's Works in Wales, 1277-1330 (1974), 309.

There was an AS personal name Lēofdæg > Loveday. If so, odd that it was not cymricized to Llyfdde/wy or the like unless the DB form represents Chesli / Gelli + laved / Llafed[d] ? Clwyd Historian, 34 (1995), 13. John Jones (c1578-1658), copyist.

An attempt to associate the name with John Jones, the book man!?

Halkyn Parish Register for 1729 has another form that looks more like Hergoll but it is possibly a botched-up -s-. These two early forms are interesting because they are correctly identified with this place-name while the original Hersedd / Hartsheath is written as Harsell in a letter written 1708. { Flints HSPub., 18(1960), 104. The stately home being described as belonging to John Lloyd JP of that place.

B Ellis, Hist. Halkyn Mountain, 130., notes that it was transferred to the Cilcain Hall Estate of the Buddicommes of Penbedw in the 1880s as part of an exchange deal. What is interesting is that a John Lloyd was tenant, since 1858 and later owner. Was he of the Lloyds of Hartsheath family? It's surely a transferred name of endearment.

While Hope originally referred to the hop 'obscure depression' hereabouts, the medieval borough of that name was Caergwrle. Its street plan supports this, while early references specify Hope at Castrum which should be read as 'at, near or towards the castle' ~ possibly given its borough status soon after Dafydd ap Gruffudd was installed there by Edward I in 1282(?).

Operated as a leadmill 1597-1683. v. J N Rhodes, 'The Lead Mills of Mold,' FHSP, 25(1971-2), 21-30; thereafter used as a haybarn 1693-1703, and from then until at least 1870 O.S.Map. as corn mill.

A new leadmill was built 1661.[ibid, 25.] There were three of these leadmills along the Alun at Mold. The principal one is thought to have been near the present day Leadmill Bridge [SJ 243642], a second at Pentre [SJ 247638] and the third possibly on the site of what later became the Cotton Factory and Tinplate Works [SJ 232649]. The latter was the 'Upper' and Pentre the 'Lower' mills.

We have the following forms in letters between Richard Mostyn of Penbedw and Edward Lhuyd during 1693/4 :

Maen Achwynfan	Maen y Chwyvan
Maen Y chwifan	Maen Y chwefan

The comments of Nesta Lloyd, ‘The Correspondence of Edward Lhuyd and Richard Mostyn’, FHSP, 25(1971-2), on the name (p.55n9) are as follows :

‘The etymology of “Achwyfan” is discussed at length in the letters, suggestions being “Achwynfaen” and “Chwefan” from Richard Mostyn and “Gwyfaen”....“Gwydhvaen”, the high pillar, from Lhuyd who confessed Britannia, 694 that after Mostyn discovery of the 1388 form “Chufan”, “I dare not acquiesce in that Etymology, tho’ at present I can think none more probable”.’

One should try and keep clear of identifying this Garmon with the St.Germanus of Auxerre. This fellow was either a mid-Wales princling or a spiritual traveller from Brittany. There are links with Deiniol (Hawarden), Tysilio (Mold), Arddun (Mold) but Sir Ifor Williams emphasised that linguistically this could not be the case. Nennius is probably the one responsible for the mixed-up. Dyma a ddywed Syr Ifor :

‘ni fedraf ddeall o gwawl sut y gallai’r enw Lladin Germanus roi Garmawn (neu Garmon) yn y Gymraeg; disgwyliid Gerfaun, c.f. L. termin-us yn rhoi terfyn. Ond mae garm yn Gymraeg am “floedd” (a gairm mewn Gwyddeleg), a’r rheswm dros gadw m heb dreiglo ydoedd ar ôl r yn bod m yn ddwbl (Pederson V.G.60.) : nid dwbl yw yn enw Germanus, os na newidwyd ef ar ôl y fuddugoliaeth a gafodd ar y Saeson, nid trwy nerth cleddyf ond trwy weiddi Haleliwia.’ [I.Williams, ‘Hen Chwedlau’, THSCymmrodorion. (1946-7), 53.]

Wnes i erioed ddarllen beth roedd gan K H Jackson i ddweud ar y mater yn ei ‘Caneuon Ffydd,’ n2., tud.128. Clywais ei fod yn dadlau i’r gwrthwyneb yno. Roedd yn sgwennu rhyw ddegawd ar ôl Syr Ifor.

New Brighton SJ 2565 v. Pentre Cythraul < Pentre Catherall ?
 I have a marginal note in FPN saying that English immigrants moved here in the 1920s and that it was then so named.
 Other references are an article by a William Rees in Papur Fama, (Mawrth 1982) which I cannot recollect. In his Hanes Wesleyaeth Gymreig (Bangor 1913), IV, 1528., H Jones states :
 'New Brighton, ond a elwir ar lafar gwlad yn Bentre'r Gwr Drwg.'
 Perhaps the immigrants came in the 1820s?
 A peep at the Census returns might solve the dating?
 First detailed census 1851 though.
 An elderly lady from Sychdyn informs me that many of that school's pupils (up to the 1950s) came from New Brighton and were known as 'The Pentre Children'. Obviously Pentre Cythraul !

*New Brighton 1861 TNA RG9/4274/-.
 New Brighton 1875 O.S.Map. [Argoed tp.]

*Several children had been born there, one aged 18yrs.
 Did the village have a name then? Orally I've heard Tre Argoed. No manuscript confirmation as yet.

Brynball 1827 Cocking Index, 129.

J N Rhodes in FHSP, 25(1971-2), 21., notes that :

‘A bole consisted of a small area chosen on the brow of a hill and facing into the prevailing wind. The area, a few feet in diameter, was surrounded by a low wall of stones with the openings made towards the wind, and with a channel from the interior of the bole to a small collecting pool just outside. The wall was filled with a fire of wood when the wind was right, and with a good wind enough heat was obtained to secure at least a partial smelting of the ore, and a trickle of melted lead flowed into the gathering pool to form a rough pig of lead....’

Apart from Pen-y-ball, Plas yn Balls and Waen-yn-balls, he reckoned that Berth-y-bwl in Axton had the same origin. Linguistically possible?

If the Dany Brugge 1485 Recog. Rolls(36), 164., Danybridge 1530 RCAWM, 96.

are misreadings for Davy then the Bishop of St.Asaph would have been one Dafydd ap Bleddyn (cons.12 Jan 1315. d.1346) v. FPN, 138.

However, Canon Henry Parry of Llanasa (d.1854) said that the 'Pont Dafydd Esgob upon the Clwyd together with two other little Bridges between it and the Cathedral Church of St.Asaph, were made up of new with stones (when before they were made up of timber) a hundred pounds being levied on the county of Flint towards that work, according to the verses following by Pyers Roberts of Bronwhylfa [in Latin & not copied]

A new Bridge about three hundred yards higher up the River and a new approach to the city of St.Asaph, were constructed at considerable expense to the county in 1817/.Architect Mr.Mr. Pens[ore]?

Pont Dafydd Esgob [built] in the time of Henry the Seventh (1509-47) and Rhuddlan Bridge* by Bishop William Hughes in the days of Elizabeth.’

[NLW MS. 18,309B.]

* Swept away by floods 1569, rebuilt 1575, so I read somewhere.

J E Messham in FHSJ, 35(1999), 30n44 says that ‘ “Davidbrugge” (today known as Pontdafydd Esgob) is found in the accounts from 1301 onwards but the name is transcribed as “danybrugge in the published volumes above mentioned. For other instances of the spelling “Davidbrugge”, SC6/1187/5, 1191/6-11, 1192/1, etc. The bounds of the franchise of Rhuddlan ran along the river to include Cyrchynan meadow, and from Pontdafydd followed the old road from St.Asaph towards Plas yn Cwm. Thus Pontdafydd is mentioned in Chester records long before the time of the bishop after whom it is supposed to have been named. He probably built a new bridge to replace an older one.’ Not altogether logic because the wooden/stone crossing was thus named prior to the Fourteenth Century; before the first Dafydd Esgob came on the scene. It would have taken some money to build a bridge in those days, so Dafydd would be from the upper-class or ecclesiastic mob. Dafydd ap Gruffydd (d.1283)? Do we know who the Llywelyn was in Tre Llywelyn? The Welsh princes had Carneddau named after them.

B Ellis, History Halkyn Mountain, 149., states that it refers to 'a row of houses in a field' and that the first map of the area to show any buildings on Halkyn Mountain 'was drawn in 1738 and shows only the Miners Arms, alongside the then post road from Northop to Denbigh.'

		Identification of earlier forms?
Rhyd-y-golau	SJ 2364	With the other five ancient fords hereabouts of Welsh origin in name I find it difficult to accept that this is English Coly's Ford. The modern pronunciation is Rhyd-y-goli. Is this the original Cymraeg form or has it come under the influence of English? Perhaps a river plant grew profusely hereabouts ~ like cauliflower !!? Haven't come across a Colly in Moldsdale yet. That family were based at Rhuddlan. cf William Coly there in 1338 FRO, D/GW/1504. Colyislond is mentioned in 1471-2 FRO, D/GW/1545 & Cawilscroft 1335-6 Arch Cam (1893), 114.

Since there is a Roe Gau (recte Rogau) in St.Asaph recorded as yro Gau 1404 NLW Gilbert Smith 7.

It had been donated to the church of St.A. by a David Waring, described as 'late treasurer' of that place. Interestingly later comes groft row wering 1669 NLW Gilbert Smith 58.

No doubt commemorating its link with the benefactor

It may be the Roe Fawr referred to in BU Mostyn 2738., dated 1817.(?)

the Rowe 1686 NLW Wales 4/992/3., appears in Talacre.

Roe Hill 1832 Cocking Index, 309., in Rhuddlan hd is

I see no reason to doubt that beirdd is poets and that this land was once conferred upon some 'royal' bards in the distant past. No proof though. One should not completely ignore Henry Lewis' statement of 1946 : 'ceir beirdd fel ffurf unigol genidol, < B. bardi.' Datblygiad Yr Iaith Gymraeg (Caerdydd), 44-5.

Cynwrig Fychan ap Cynwrig ap Madog

The survival of a local folklore on both sides of the Dee estuary tells of the rood screen at Hawarden being thrown into the river at Wepre and the incoming tide took it up to Chester, where it gave it's name to a sandbank there still called 'The Roodey' today! The Cestrians claim to have buried it where they found it, erecting a stone monument to mark the spot.. It is said to have displayed the following description :

The Jews their Gods did crucify,
The Hawardeners theirs did drown;
'Cause with their wants she'd not comply,
And lies under this cold stone.

Yn ôl y Myvyrian Archaiology, 309., ysgrifennodd Gruffudd ap Maredudd ap Dafydd (fl.1350) 'I'r Grog o Gaer'. Dyma ran ohonni :

Doeth delw ner Aber wybr uchelfaer nef
 Naf gwerthfawr mireinglaer
 Dwfr dir cor eglur wir caer
 Dyfrdwy or mordwy maerdaer.

A fu Iolo Morgannwg yn busnesu yma!?

Ellis Davies, FHSP, 13(1952-3), 34., makes the following observation re this place-name :
 ‘.... The ford probably being that which formerly existed at the south east approach to the village near the house of Glanrafon, at present now the Post Office.... It might be suggested that the ford was designated “white” on account of the foaming water of the stream as it tumbled down its strong channel on either side of the ford.’ He also makes the point that the place has never borne the name Rhydwen.
